

A black and white portrait of a young man with dark hair, wearing a suit, white shirt, and tie. The portrait is set within a decorative frame that has a leaf-like motif in the bottom right corner. The man is looking slightly to the left of the camera.

William Hayward, who succeeded Elmer Dover as secretary of the Republican national committee, has the distinction of being the youngest judge in his native state, Nebraska, and the youngest state chairman in the country, having been chairman of the Nebraska state central committee for two years. He is 31 years old, was born in Nebraska City, and has been practicing law there since he was graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1901. He is the son of M. L. Hayward, who was elected to the United States senate from Nebraska in 1902, and who died on the day he was to take his seat.
